RG Revved for Growth

Fractional Chief Revenue Officer for PE-backed B2B.I fix the reason a portfolio company isn't hitting its number.

Operating partners usually call me when

- "The plan called for growth. Two quarters in, the number keeps missing."
- "Nobody has found the reason, and the board discounts the forecast."
- "A full-time sales leader is a six-month search and a coin flip."
- "Expansion flatlined after year one."
- "The founder is still in every deal that matters."

Jason Rigolli
Fractional CRO

How I work

I take ownership of the revenue engine. I don't hand over a deck of suggestions and leave. I start inside the company: where revenue actually comes from, where it leaks, and what changed when growth flattened. One accountable operator, in weeks instead of a search. And I stay until the engine runs on the company's people, not on me.

WIN	KEEP	GROW
How you find and close new customers: the pipeline, the process, who closes.	How you hold them: delivery that matches the promise, renewals nobody has to chase.	How you grow the customers you already have: the expansion plan, on purpose and on the calendar.

One engine, three jobs. Every miss I've seen traces back to one of the three; the diagnosis says which.

The portfolio company that fits

- Founder-led or family-owned B2B, roughly $5M to $15M in revenue, early in the hold.
- Growth slowing, or stopped, despite new people, new tactics, new tools, and the plan assumed it wouldn't.
- The sponsor wants the number fixed before the next board meeting, not a six-month search.

The record

205%
of the engagement target, on average

60–80%
of growth from customers they already had

18→64%
improved close rate on marketing leads 100%

of engines still growing after hand-off

Averages across engagements. Two decades running revenue as CRO, VP Sales, and VP Operations, all of it inside founder-led companies; most recently the commercial lead for a leadership-advisory firm's private equity practice. Two companies co-founded, both exited.

What the sponsor gets

A conversation first. If it makes sense, a look under the hood: a fixed-fee diagnostic of the company's revenue engine, 2 to 3 weeks. You get the findings and what I'd do about them, then choose: run the plan inside the company, or have me execute it and hand back a running engine plus the job description for the permanent hire. No obligation.

Jason Rigolli · Fractional CRO · Revved for Growth · FixYourRevenueEngine.com · jason@FixYourRevenueEngine.com