RG Revved for Growth

Fractional Chief Revenue Officer for companies running EOS. I fix the reason your client isn't hitting its number.

Implementers usually call me when

- "Rocks are on track, the scorecard is clean, and the number still misses."
- "The revenue seat is the one box on the chart nobody really owns."
- "The revenue Rock keeps rolling to next quarter."
- "The L10 argues about the forecast every week."
- "The founder is still in every deal that matters."

Jason Rigolli
Fractional CRO

How I work

I take ownership of the revenue engine. I don't hand over a deck of suggestions and leave. I start inside the business: where revenue actually comes from, where it leaks, and what changed when growth flattened. I slot in beside the cadence you already run; the revenue seat gets an owner. And I stay until the engine runs on their people, not on me.

WIN	KEEP	GROW
How you find and close new customers: the pipeline, the process, who closes.	How you hold them: delivery that matches the promise, renewals nobody has to chase.	How you grow the customers you already have: the expansion plan, on purpose and on the calendar.

One engine, three jobs. Every miss I've seen traces back to one of the three; the diagnosis says which.

The client that fits

- Founder-led or family-owned B2B, roughly $5M to $15M in revenue, running on an operating system.
- Growth slowing, or stopped, despite new people, new tactics, new tools.
- The owner wants the number fixed and the seat handed back running, not a retainer that never ends.

The record

205%	60–80%	18→64%	100%
of the engagement target, on average	of growth from customers they already had	improved close rate on marketing leads	of engines still growing after hand-off

Averages across engagements. Two decades running revenue as CRO, VP Sales, and VP Operations, all of it inside founder-led companies and alongside the people who install their operating systems. Two companies co-founded, both exited.

What happens next

A short three-way call, or a two-line intro with both of us copied. If it makes sense, the next step is a look under the hood: a fixed-fee diagnostic of the revenue engine, 2 to 3 weeks. The owner gets the findings and what I'd do about them, then chooses: run the plan themselves or have me execute it and hand back a running engine. No obligation, and your seat at the table stays yours.

Jason Rigolli · Fractional CRO · Revved for Growth · FixYourRevenueEngine.com · jason@FixYourRevenueEngine.com