RG Revved for Growth

Referral Partner Guide. What to listen for, why Jason, and how this runs both ways.

What you'll hear from the founder

- "We're not growing as fast as I expected."
- "I'm still the best salesperson in the company, and I don't have time to sell."
- "I don't know why we can't hit our targets."
- "I'm tired of the excuses from sales and marketing."
- "I'm still in every deal that matters."

Why Jason (the things you can say out loud)

He fixes the reason a company isn't hitting its number. Operator, not advisor: he takes the seat and owns it, and he doesn't hand over a deck of suggestions and leave. He fixes the whole engine, winning customers, keeping them, growing them, as one system: three CRO seats, all inside founder-led companies. Two-time co-founder, both exited; he has sat where your client sits. The engagement ends and the system runs without him. He works beside whatever operating system the company runs; he doesn't replace you.

THE SALES LEADER	THE NUMBERS	THE CLIENT
"We're on our second or third sales leader in a few years." "Do I need to replace him, or is it something else?"	The forecast gets argued about every week. Pipeline looks fine and revenue still misses. Revenue grows only when the founder is in the deal.	Founder-led or family-owned B2B, roughly $5M to $15M. Growth slowing, or stopped, despite new people, new tactics, new tools.

You don't need to diagnose anything. If you hear any of these, the introduction is worth making.

How this runs both ways

- Inside every engagement I look under the hood, so I'm often the first to know when a client needs a fractional CFO, COO, or an implementer. I make the introduction to the right partner and share what I found along the way.
- For partners who expect a referral fee, that's available on request.

The record

205%	60–80%	18→64%	100%
of the engagement target, on average	of growth from customers they already had	improved close rate on marketing leads	of engines still growing after hand-off

Averages across engagements. Two decades running revenue as CRO, VP Sales, and VP Operations, all inside founder-led companies.

Making the introduction

A short three-way intro, fifteen minutes: you frame what you're hearing and I mostly listen. A two-line email works too: the client's name, one sentence on what you're hearing, both of us copied. The first conversation with the founder is 30 minutes about their situation, never a pitch.
